Uzbekistan's location at the center of #CentralAsia makes it an obvious choice to become a regional energy hub. It lies at the crossroads of the region, connecting the ends of the Eurasian continent.

As Uzbekistan continues to modernize its power grid using #renewableenergy including solar and wind farms, its edge as a regional power hub strengthens. Grid reliability is key to a functioning modern society. Renewable energy can both increase grid reliability and reduce carbon emissions.

By 2030, Uzbekistan has committed to developing 5GW of renewable energy, with projects to develop more wind and solar energy. Other improvements to #infrastructure include upgrading power lines and inviting private investors to bring new technology into Uzbekistan, reports the Ministry of Energy.

The interconnection of national power grids allows for power-sharing throughout the region, reducing power outages and creating access to reliable energy. Regional energy sharing reduces outages for member countries, securing reliable access to power for all people.

Dilshoda Shodmonova

When I was a child and went to school, we unfortunately missed a lot of classes because of the cotton harvest. Today, thanks to the reforms and the absence of child labour and forced labour, my own daughter can go to school uninterrupted and get her education. This shows the tremendous progress we have achieved, and it encourages me to continue my work as a labour rights activist. We talked to many pickers during the monitoring this year. When we gave them the feedback mechanism numbers, I heard the confidence in their voices. This is another aspect of the monitoring that motivates me.

President Mirziyoyev is known as the great reformer, behind much of the substantial changes made across #Uzbekistan over the last 5 years. From opening borders to increasing tourism and global trade, Uzbekistan has quickly secured its seat on the international stage as the up-and-coming global leader of Central Asia.

Under the leadership of President Mirziyoyev, Uzbekistan continues to modernize into a hub for trade, innovation, and commerce. Entrepreneurial innovation has been prioritized in the energy sector and environmental protection as #climatechange continues to affect the region.

The Uzbek people are ready to step into their third Renaissance, building upon the two prior renaissances of Uzbekistan's rich history as the epicenter of the Silk Road. The Third Renaissance will emphasize entrepreneurship and global partnership.

"Building a New Uzbekistan is not a whim, not a subjective phenomenon, but an objective necessity, which has its own fundamental historical foundations ... based on the centuries-long aspirations of our people and fully conforming to their national interests," said President Shavkat Mirziyoyev in an interview with the Yangi Uzbekistan Newspaper.
